

Ghost Rider pops out Stars in throat-ripping scene

By Maggie Thompson

In Ghost Rider #25, Dan Ketch will have his throat ripped out in a sequence which will include a die-cut pop-up on cover stock.

Marvel Director of Sales Lou Bank said the issue will celebrate Ghost Rider's 20th anniversary. The issue will run 52 pages, and Marvel promotional material to shops described the story: "This issue is crammed with more action than ever before. Blackout is out of jail and out to kill Dan Ketch and his family. In a dramatic battle, Blackout rips out Dan's throat, and Ghost Rider tries to transform in time to save Dan."

The issue leads into Marvel's "Midnight Sons" titles, starting with the six-part crossover titled "Rise of the Midnight Sons" — which officially begins with Ghost Rider #28 (scheduled to ship June 9) and also involving Spirits of Vengeance, Morbius, Darkhold, and Nightstalkers.

Bank said the pop-up in #25 "will make a Chicago butcher house look mild."

The issue is written by Howard Mackie, pencilled by Ron Wagner, and inked by Mike Witherby — and will feature four pages of pin-ups. The $2.75 issue is scheduled to ship March 10.

'Alpha Flight' # 106 Alert the media: Northstar announces he's gay

Marvel Director of Sales Lou Bank said Jan. 8 that there have been indications that a plot development in Alpha Flight #106 may get media attention — and some increased store traffic as a result.

In that issue, scheduled to ship Jan. 14, Northstar will make a public announcement that he is gay. The description in Marvel's release to retailers said, "The AIDS story line this issue prompts Northstar to call a press conference. At the conference Northstar announces that he, an Olympic athlete and super hero, is gay." The information added, "The controversial subject will make this a hot seller so order enough copies for your customers."

Bank said interest has been shown by news media, and there is a possibility that retailers did not order enough copies of the $1.75 title, written by Scott Lobdell with art by Mark Pacella and Dan Panosian.

"We did not overrun the first-edition print run," Bank said, "but we'll do a second printing, if demand warrants."

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE

1991 Capital City Awards Distributor notes good and bad in the industry

[This is taken from the January 1992 issue of Internal Correspondence and is the distributor's sixth annual Capital City Awards. These awards are given as a way to reflect on the activities of the year and draw some conclusions about it.

The Capital City Awards presented here are based on that company's evaluation of activities in the direct market during 1991. These choices are based on the business impact of events, not on quality or artistic merit.

The opinions expressed by Capital do not necessarily represent the opinion of the editors of Comics Buyer's Guide.

Publisher of the Year:

Marvel Comics

Marvel Comics wins the Publisher of the Year Award for the first time this year. Under the leadership of new Chief Operating Officer Terry Stewart and a Ronald Perelman-salted management team, Marvel has had a breakthrough year in a number of areas.

Marvel's initial public offering raised $74 million and then more than doubled in price in a generally bearish environment (see Deal of the Year).

Marvel launched two new series with record first-issue sales, setting a new standard for the measurement of a piece sale success in the comics business (see Titles of the Year). These huge sales were the result of careful coordination of the marketing, packaging, and content of those titles (see Marketing Campaigns of the Year).

Marvel's success in 1991 was due to a number of factors. First, Marvel has been positioned toward more lower-priced formats than any other comic-book publisher in recent years. This positioning means that Marvel has had the most product at the price points consumers are buying in this recessionary environment.

Second, we would have to rate the management melange of new faces brought in by Perelman and experienced publishing execs successful so far. For example, it is doubtful whether Marvel's management staff of a couple of years ago could have engineered a public offering as successful as the one Marvel had this year. On the other hand, Marvel's publishing successes this year were the result of the knowledge of the comics business held by the editorial, publishing, and marketing management at Marvel.

Third, Marvel has reacted pragmatically to market forces and expanded on successful techniques of tweaking sales while abandoning those that don't work. This is true of Marvel's editorial product, as well as of the packaging and marketing areas. Tom DeFalco and his executive editors have run a smoothly functioning machine that turns out a polished editorial product at a constantly increasing pace. The overall coordination of the line, in terms of exploiting the commercial potentials of the shared universe, is at an all-time high.

Working closely with this powerful editorial team is a group of youthful sales, marketing and packaging staffers who help insure Marvel's success by practicing a commercial pragmatism of a particularly ruthless variety. It's a beautifully simple decision-making process that is practiced in its simplest form at Marvel.

This group (now without Carol Kalish, its founder) has been truly inventive at coming up with new twists on the traditional comic book and, once something is out in the marketplace, they observe and react. If quick reprints sell, they do more;

if they don't, they do fewer, and so on. The single-minded devotion to pumping sales is awe-inspiring.

Marvel made some missteps in 1991 in the pursuit of new

This is the cover painting by Dave Dorman for the full-color Rust #1, shipping in April from Adventure Comics. This new series marks the return of the creator, Steve Miller, who developed the character in 1987. "I'm looking forward to a second chance at my creation and finally telling the stories that I've waited almost five years to write," Miller said. The regular series artists are Phillip Hester and Ande Parks. The series previously was published by Now Comics.

Double Diamond Press relocates 'Omaha' print address changes

Persons wishing to place an order for the Hepcats / Omaha silkscreen print must now send checks or money orders to Double Diamond Press at 9300 Northgate Blvd. #116, Austin, Texas 78758-6105. Telephone credit card orders must now be made to (512) 837-5559 or (512) 837-5545, between 4 p.m. and midnight central time, seven days a week.

The prints cost $60 and are silkscreened in 10 colors and signed by Hepcats creator Martin Wagner. They are being sold as a benefit for Omaha artist Reed Waller, who was diagnosed with colon cancer in November. They were first announced in CBG #946.

Wagner said he apologizes for anyone caught in the telephone confusion, and says there is still ample opportunity for people to order a print. Said Wagner,

"Let's take this opportunity to show the industry how independent comics fans will band together with love and support for a creator in a time of crisis!"

Wagner also encouraged people to call with questions either about the print or about Waller's condition. "I talk to Reed a lot, so better the truth than the rumor mill."

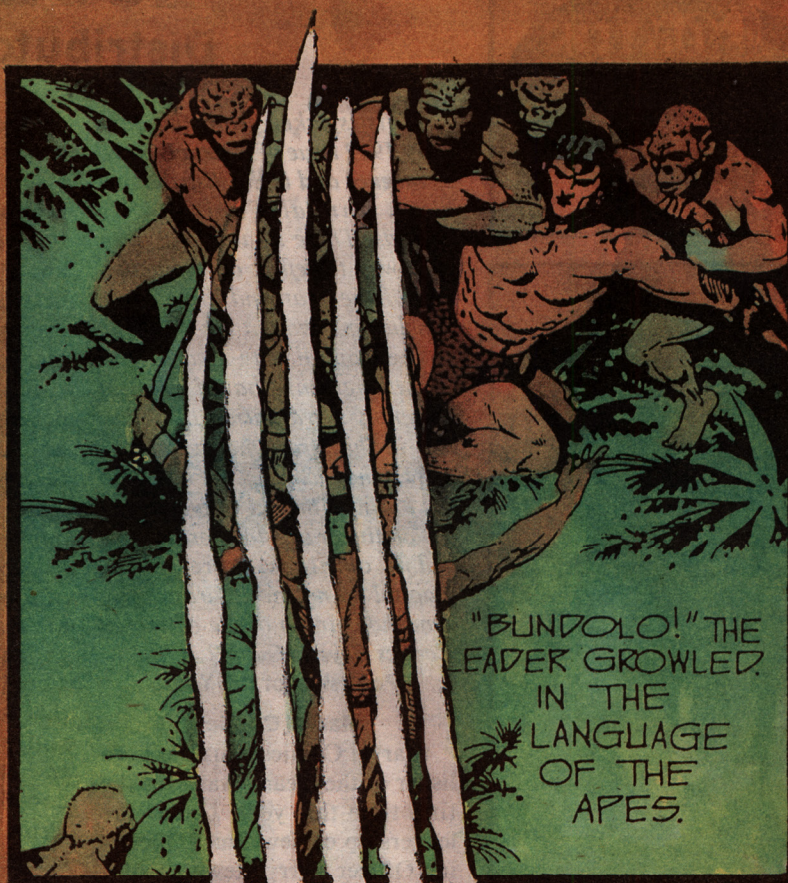

SPECIAL OFFER ON DISNEY BACK ISSUES!

For a limited time back issues of all your favorite Disney Comics are available for half the regular mail order price! This is your chance to fill in those gaps in your collection, or to get your collection started—but hurry! Stocks are limited, and once they're gone, they're gone!

Introducing 'Vampirella'

By Richard Howell

Unexpected twists, nightmares, danger, and death punctuate the next issue of Harris Comics' limited series Vampirella: Morning in America. Issue #3 of the series is on sale this month, distributed to comics specialty stores by Dark Horse.

Lurking beneath a beautiful original painted cover by Michael William Kaluta are another 48 pages of heroics and suspense featuring the lovely — and deadly — Vampirella.

Vampirella is comics' most famous horror-adventure heroine. She combines the glamor of a super-crusader with the lethal allure of a monster-genre predator. Vampi is also an extremely beautiful woman, outfitted in an exotic, erotic manner which hides none of her charms. Her fascination is not exclusively supernatural.

In Vampirella: Morning in America, Vampi has returned to her friend Pendragon and her occasional lover Adam Van Helsing after a 10-year absence. The world in which she finds herself is tainted by the spread of Chaos, and her old foe Ethan Shroud leads an effort to restore the Chaos-God Nuberus to our dimension.

So far, Vampirella's braved the terrors that stalk Washington, D.C., at night to rejoin Adam, and she's beaten back the demonic demagogue Bane, but Shroud's plan is complex and his influence is vast already. Adam's father Professor Conrad Van Helsing has been sacrificed to Chaos' cause, and Shroud has also kidnapped young schoolgirl Chelsea Cantrell in order to mold her into his own more compliant Vampirella.

With chapter #9, previewed here, Shroud's multi-layered planning takes some surprising turns. Before this issue is over one former character will return, one will die, and one will be horribly transformed, each of the main cast members will confront unsettling secrets about themselves, courtesy of Shroud's dream-demons, and Shroud's triumph will loom ever closer.

The only one who has a chance of stopping Shroud — and Nuberus — is Vampirella. With her strength, intelligence, beauty, and fierce lust for her enemy's blood, she makes a formidable force herself, but there is one final secret that even she might not be able to withstand.

Writer Kurt Busiek and regular art team Louis LaChance (penciller) and John Nyberg (inker) are joined this issue by guest artists Kelley Jones, Steve Leialoha, Colleen Doran, Carmine Infantino, Richard Howell, Trina Robbins, and Stan Shaw. This issue marks the first time Trina Robbins has contributed art to the adventures of the character she co-designed (with master fantasy artist Frank Frazetta) in the late 1960s.

Harris Comics Associate Publisher Meloney Crawford Chadwick noted, "We've been really pleased with the positive reader response to Vampirella: Morning in America. The Kaluta covers present a seductive, enigmatic Vampirella, attracting both long-time Vampirella fans and new readers, who are being bitten by her charms for the first time."

Vampirella: Morning in America #3 is the third of four issues in this deluxe-format limited series. Each issue is 48 pages of moody black-and-white artwork with new painted color covers, square-bound, and priced at $3.95. The final issue of the series will be at comics shops the third week in March.

Will Eisner

Guest Editorial

By Dave Harper, Numismatic Editor for Krause Publications

[Editors' Note: Dave showed us what he had written for one of his publications, and we thought it bore repeating to our audience.]

Get on with it. That is the best advice any editorial writer can give to a hobbyist. It is the antidote to the most pernicious transmutation of outlook on life and on the hobby that has occurred in this generation: the turning of every one of life's major purchases into an investment.

Financial advisers call a house the largest investment a person makes. Automobiles become investments in transportation. Consumer electronics are often labeled as investments in sound or some other term that reflects what the gadget happens to do. It is time we do something to roll this back. While we can't do anything about houses, cars, and electronic goods, we can strike a blow on behalf of numismatics.

Numismatics is a hobby. It was once the hobby of kings. It became a mass-appeal hobby during the 20th century. Presently, we are probably somewhere between the two extremes.

A hobby by its very nature is not intended primarily to be an investment — unless, of course, you think of it as an investment in yourself. A hobby is something that is not work-related. It is a leisure-time activity. Its primary purpose is to be a diversion from everyday cares and to be something that allows the mind to shed its world-weariness.

Throw in the concept of investment and suddenly we think of the reasons we are working, which kids need braces for their teeth, and whether it is time to refinance the mortgage to meet college or other expenses. This type of thinking is hardly setting aside one's regular concerns.

What is worse, looking at coins as investments can easily preclude action at the time it is most required. There are many coins that make only infrequent appearances on the market. In considering their purchase, it isn't so much a matter of cost as of availability. A buy must be made on the spot, or a wait of months or years begins until the next example surfaces.

A coin of this type may show up during an economic recession. An investor might hesitate in making the purchase. A hobbyist acts and enjoys the conclusion of a successful chase.

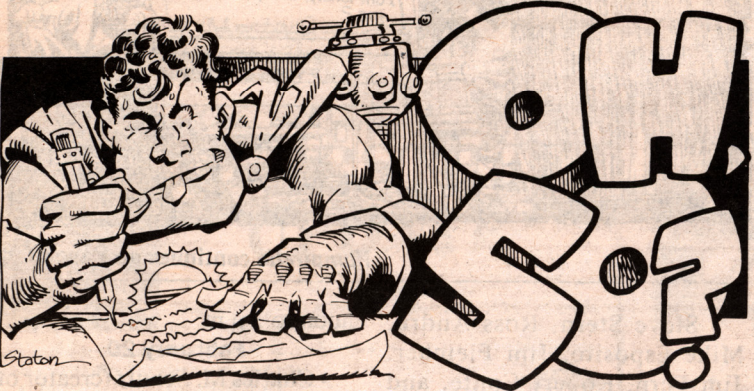

In addition, a hobby career is a relatively short one. Successful collectors act because they have reached a time of life, a temperament, and a financial position that allows them to spend the hours it takes to study coins and the funds to acquire them. This period does not last long.

If investment considerations intrude, more often than not, paralysis is a result. There always seems to be good economic reasons not to buy something. What it comes down to is this: The right time to buy is when you are ready.

A particular coin may be a little more expensive than expected or it may be surprisingly cheaper, depending on economic conditions. However, collectors who move at a steady hobby pace are affected only by the long-term trend. The highs and the lows balance out each other and, by the close of a hobby career of 10, 20, or 30 years, the short-term fluctuations have been rendered meaningless. This is why collectors generally are not known for throwing money away. They have a reputation for astuteness.

When the time comes to sell, it is no accident that the highest prices seem to go to logically assembled collections, rather than to accumulations of the most undervalued buys of the last couple of decades.

So get on with it. If you are a collector, collect. Your time in the hobby is precious. If you are confronted with a buying decision, match it against your hobby goals, not against what might happen in the world economy in the next six months.

It was the afternoon of Dec. 31, near the end of that period most folks call "The Holiday Shopping Season," better known to us retail drones as "Hell on Earth." Our after-Christmas sale had business hopping at my audio-video store, so I was reluctant to get involved in a sales pitch with the old guy by the mini-systems. He looked to be in his seventies, and customers his age tend to tie you up with many time-consuming questions; my first urge was to ignore him and move on to likelier prospects.

But after a moment of watching him squint through thick-lensed glasses at the small type on the CD player controls, I relented and "engaged" him, as we salesmen say. I was pleasantly surprised to find that the gent knew his hi-fi pretty well. After jawing a bit about big bands of the '30s and '40s, we soon selected an appropriate system for him. Then came the bring-down: He asked if someone could deliver the set to his apartment, hook it up, and coach him on its operation that night.

"Yeah, you bet," I thought to myself. It was New Year's Eve, the store didn't close 'til 8 p.m. and I'd been invited to a party by a woman of my acquaintance with whom I wanted to deepen said acquaintance. Honoring the guy's request was the last thing on my fun list. I delayed making a commitment on the install job until I had him at the checkout counter. I'm chagrined to say I had every intention of getting his money in the drawer and then putting off the hookup for a day or two. As he began laboriously filling out his check, he commented that he'd "certainly chosen an interesting profession" for someone with poor eyesight; he was a retired artist. Then he slid the check over the counter.

The name on the check was "Joseph Shuster."

Nah, thought I. But the birthdate on his ID was 1914; that seemed about right. And there was the eye-sight thing. Finally, I had to ask, casually as I could, "Are you the Joe Shuster? As in Superman?" He smiled and nodded.

Well, it's too late to make a story short, but I did the delivery and the install, of course. He lived quite near my store. His place was cluttered the way older single guys' often are — like mine usually is, actually. (Among the stacks of papers and paraphernalia, I spotted a copy of Funnyman #2 and what looked like a Slam Bradley page proof.)

The hour's conversation was light and pleasant. At no time did I actually blurt, "The character you co-created induced me to read and helped to shape my moral values! Your work sparked the success of an art form that has provided a constant source of joy throughout my life!" I mean, it's hard working something like that into a casual chat. But Joe could spot a fanboy, myopia or no; he inscribed one of his personal copies of Superman Archives Volume 3 and presented it to me.

Thank you, Joe. Not just for the

No two collections are alike!

Selection from typical Speculator Collection.

Selection from typical Re-Reader Collection.

But every collection needs ComiCovers™ protection.

Recently at a national comic book convention, Moondog's was asked an interesting question, "Which variety of ComiCovers™ is the best bag: the new 2 mil. polypropylene or the old reliable 3 mil. polyethylene?"

We replied, "That's like asking which is better; a hammer or a screwdriver. It all depends on the job at hand."

First we pointed out the key differences between the two types of ComiCovers™:

POLYETHYLENE

Thicker
Excellent clarity
Flexible
Has "memory"*

POLYPROPYLENE

Thinner
Superb clarity
Rigid
Has no "memory"*

* "MEMORY" MEANS BENT OR CREASED PLASTIC "REMEMBERS" TO RETURN TO ITS ORIGINAL SHAPE.

Ask yourself, "What kind of collection am I building?" The job at hand determines which ComiCovers™ tool is best for you. Do you recognize yourself in any of the following categories?

1. The Casual Fan who reads, bags and files; rarely handling a comic after it has been read.

We recommend this collector use polyethylene ComiCovers™ for their durable thickness and long-term dependability. As long he stores his comics in a cool, dark dry place, polyethylene ComiCovers™ will easily last five years or more.

2. Speculators — These value driven fans wheel and deal current hot back issues. They demand a slick looking product to show off their books.

We urge the use of polypropylene ComiCovers™ for their superb clarity.

3. Re-Readers — Avid connoisseurs and historians of the comic book industry. They frequently handle their favorite comics in search of facts and statistics. Often they re-read them just for the joy of it!

Polyethylene ComiCovers™ withstand constant handling better than polypropylene because of their "memory." Accidental creases and folds in polyethylene ComiCovers™ will smooth out and disappear with time.

4. Retailers — Store owners and convention dealers. Their inventory demands the brightest look possible.

The superb clarity of polypropylene allows the retailer to best show off and display his goods. Our American made polypropylene ComiCovers™ are the clearest bags available on the market today! Another consideration is security. Price stickers are nearly impossible to remove from polypropylene bags with out leaving some physical evidence of tampering. In general, stickers and tape can be easily removed from polyethylene.

Moondog's ComiCovers™ are the only brand name bags available in both polyethylene and polypropylene. Smart retailers stock both! They know their customers are building a wide assortment of collections and will come to them for the right tools to get the job done! Don't be caught short with only one variety of ComiCovers™.

Since 1981, Moondog's has sold nearly one-half billion ComiCovers™ brand bags! Unlike our competitors' bags, ComiCovers™ are manufactured in the United States. American made production insures consistent high quality and uninterrupted availability.

And don't forget that all our products are covered by Moondog's Total Satisfaction Guarantee: If for any reason you are not fully satisfied with our ComiCare™ brand products, then simply return them for a full refund!

I was interested to see mention of Sterling Holloway being honored. It has been a disappointment to me for some time that his voice-overs on cartoons have been voiced-over again by Uncle Scrooge. I thought his voice one of the best things about some of the cartoons like "Mickey and the Beanstalk." I know I have seen him in some films, but his voice is what is distinctive. I would be interested to know a bit more about him (which at the moment is a bit more than nothing).

For your records, my favorite strip is Wolff and Byrd, and I also like the Eisner strip. I usually don't read the other strips but often enjoy the single jokes. I enjoy But I Digress a lot, and Tony's Tips. And I still think that Rhoads' joke about the lawyers in Hell would sell well as a poster (to lawyers).

I am of the opinion that saving comics as an investment is counter-productive, as the prices of new comics are rising fast, so the values of old comics drop back in comparison. I keep thousands of old comics because I like keeping old comics, but they take up lots of room. Most of them are worth very little. On the other hand, I decided to "drop out" of Spider-Man because I had lost interest (and track), so I took a few boxes down to my shop and now have a credit of $1200, so perhaps...

The Flash finally made it down here for a while. It was well made, but I was not surprised to see it die, as it had a fatal flaw (which was not quite so obvious in the comic book). The much-touted episodes with The Trickster were the worst, as it was painfully obvious that, at any time, The Flash could have gone over and knocked him down. The only successful episodes were where Barry had to solve a problem or get from here to there very fast. In general, television heroes work best where they have a slight edge over the ungodly. One I remember from way back was a British series called The Champions.

Harlan Ellison's stories about fans are not entirely surprising. Comics fans tend to be introverts with problems in socializing (Hey! Don't look at me!), and there is a high probability of abnormal behavior among them, which means that the normal 1% of the population might be 5% among fans.

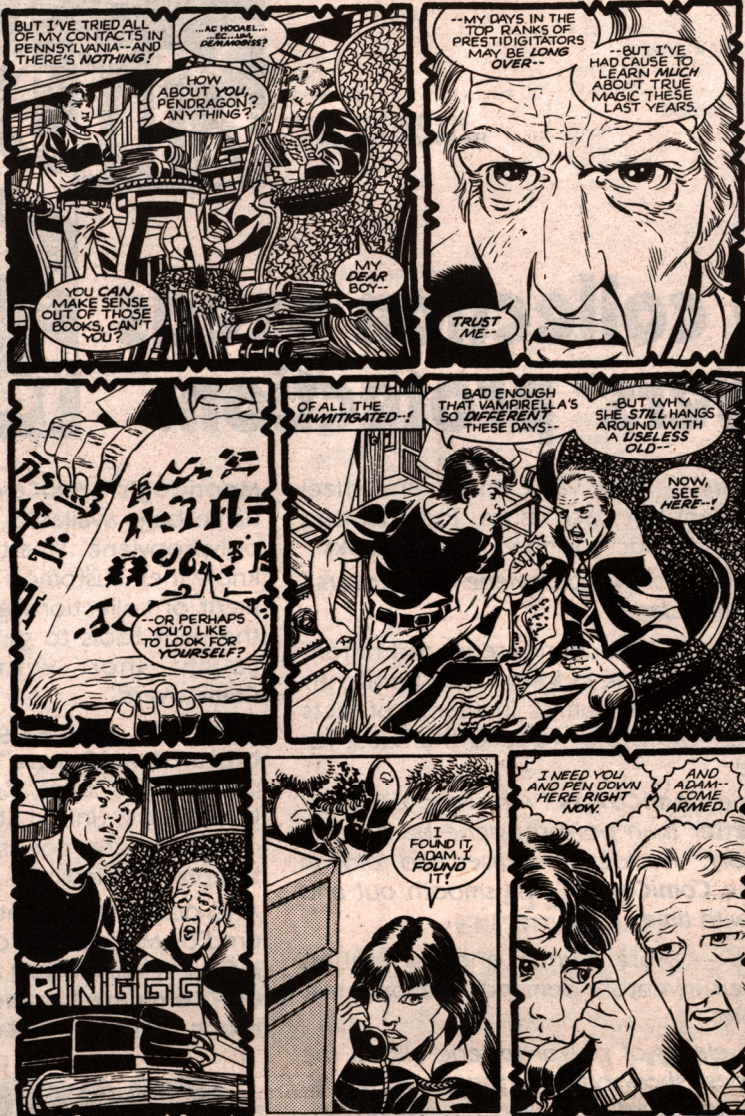

On the subject of smoking, I recently discovered Martha Grimes' detective stories and have devoured most of them, but I find it distracting that everybody in her novels smokes!

The flaws pointed out recently in the logic of Armageddon 2001 had not at all occurred to me, but something which jarred a little was the fact that in all the aftermaths nobody even mentioned the fact that Dove had been killed! Maybe someone could have remarked, "Shame about Dove!" Is it possible that Monarch and Captain Atom are going to arrive back in our time just before the event and prevent her death, with more Monarchs than Kangs around?

P.S. It would be a terrible waste of money, but I am seriously tempted to go to another San Diego Con!

narration was dubbed over by Ludwig von Drake, not Uncle Scrooge. We are not fond of Ludwig — Don, in particular, gets livid at the very idea of dubbing Ludwig over the narration of Rex Allen on "Windwagon Smith" — and pretty much quit watching Disney on TV when that character came along.

We don't know a lot about Sterling Holloway, but we admire his vocal talents — he was "Smee" in Peter Pan, is the voice of Winnie-the-Pooh, and is one of the true Disney giants.

According to Ephraim Katz's The Film Encyclopedia, Holloway was born in 1905 in Cedartown, Ga. He was in several two-reelers and a feature film in the silent days "but made the bulk of his films in the '30s and '40s."

On TV he was Buck Singleton in The Baileys of Balboa (1964-5), Waldo Binney in The Life of Riley (1949-1958), and Harvey Evelyn in Willy (1955).

Actually, though, Edgar Bergen was the first to narrate "Mickey and the Beanstalk." And we wish Disney would release Fun and Fancy Free (1947) on prerecorded videotape with "Bongo" and "Mickey and the Beanstalk" intact.

Don recently read Andrew Vachss' Hard Candy (out of curiosity, because those novels are to be adapted by Dark Horse) and, while he writes well enough and is noted for the terseness of his prose, he could become even more terse by cutting out all references to smoking. If all references to smoking — reaching for cigarettes, taking them out of the pack, offering them to others, searching for matches, lighting the matches, lighting cigarettes, sucking in smoke, blowing out smoke, stubbing out the cigarette, reaching for another — were removed, the novels would be at least 10% shorter. Maybe he's being paid by the word.

If you do yield to temptation and attend another San Diego Comic-

Rich Markow
The Bronx, N.Y.

This is in regard to the excellent article on film adaptations of comics in the Comics Buyer's Guide Annual. I'd like to mention a few items Jim Neal missed. Since I don't have the reference books in front of me as I type this, please ask him to contact me for further details and sources.

The early years of the comic strip coincided with the development of the motion picture. There's lots of interesting parallels in the development of narrative devices and in the source material for early humorous films.

Aside from Buster Brown, already mentioned by Neal, the series Happy Hooligan, Alphonse and Gaston, and Foxy Grandpa were produced between 1900 and 1904.

Edwin S. Porter's Dream of a Rarebit Fiend, an adaptation of McCay's famous strip, was released by Edison in 1906.

Buster Brown was revived as a film series in the early to mid-1920s. The Toonerville Trolley series mentioned by Frank Capra in his autobiography also dates from this period, I think.

Joe Palooka was also a series of Vitaphone short subjects in the early or mid-1930s. Shemp Howard portrayed Knobby Walsh.

I also enjoyed the "Before/After the Code" article. I had the "after Code" edition of that Plastic Man story when it was brand new, and I remember being puzzled by some of the panels in which Plas spoke or was addressed, but did not appear. However, it was my introduction to a character which I immediately found attractive.

The Annual was thoroughly entertaining and very informative. Do you think you could do an annual every six months?

The Before-After piece on the Code is the editors' favorite from the Annual. For the benefit of those who haven't seen it, it reprints panels from two Plastic Man stories which were originally published before the Comics Code Authority was formed and which were reprinted after the Code was in effect. The piece offers a rare opportunity to observe censorship in action, since you see the same story without censorship and with censorship.]

with a few orienting notions that might help. Here is my offering.

To begin at the beginning, I'll accept comic but not book. Taking a leaf from Tom Inge, I'd say these productions are "comic" in the classical literary sense that they are not "tragic"; that is, they generally "deal with man in his human state [the god-like attributes of super-heroes notwithstanding], restrained and often made ridiculous by his limitations, his faults [the faults, you see, that exercise so much psychic energy even among most super-heroes these days], and his animal nature." Instead of "book," I'd use "magazine" by which I mean a printed document bound by saddle-stitching (or saddle-stapling).

To distinguish between "comic magazines" and "graphic novels," I'd do the same as literary scholars do: I'd turn arbitrarily to length. Moreover, since length is an aspect of packaging, the package itself can help us in selecting the appropriate term. In literary criticism, the term novel is used to distinguish a work of "extended fiction" from a shorter work (such works being termed "short stories"). Although many literary scholars shy away from quantitative measures, in common usage, most works of fiction that are called novels are at least 50,000 words long.

Hot Book Reveals B-Movie Queens' Secrets

Cinema 'Bad Girls' Tell Their Stories In Words, Photos

They're the women who star in B-movies, those "bad girls" you've seen in such film classics as Stripped To Kill, Sorority Babes In The Slimeball Bowl-O-Rama, Slave Girls From Beyond Infinity, Hollywood Chainsaw Hookers, Amazon Women On The Moon, Cafe Flesh, Death Row Diner, and Attack Of The Killer Bimbos—and now Jewel Shepard reveals their most intimate secrets in her book Invasion Of The B-Girls.

Shepard, who has appeared in dozens of B-films—including Return of the Living Dead, Party Camp, and Hollywood Hot Tubs—has taken out her trusty tape recorder and interviewed her friends to get their real stories, for the record, and to share with her—and us—personal photos from their private collections. When Jewel asks questions like "How do you feel about nude scenes?" their answers are candid, honest, and scintillating.

Invasion Of The B-Girls will tell you everything you ever hoped to know about today's hottest B-Girls, including Linnea Quigley, Brinke Stevens, Monique Gabrielle, Becky LeBeau, and Kitten Natividad. Also revealing themselves are popular B-movie actresses of the past such as Caroline Munro (Captain Kronos, Vampire Hunter), Yvette Vickers (Attack Of The Fifty-Foot Woman), and Kathleen Harris (It Came From Outer Space). This book is a must-read—and see—for all film fans.

Invasion Of The B-Girls is a portrait of the cinema's most sensational sex symbols, profusely illustrated with photographs, and told in their own words. These are their stories: the truth, as compiled by one of their own.

Invasion of the B-Girls by Jewel Shepard hits comic shops this March. The 160-page, 8 1/2 x 11 book, filled with photos, retails for $12.95.

THIS IS FIT TO PRINT NUMBER 400: A public service message.

Perhaps you've seen all the reviews (pro, con, and just plain incomprehensible) about Oliver Stone's movie, JFK. You've probably also seen our ad (on this very page, where it has run for a couple of weeks) offering a deal on our Coup D'Etat Trading Cards if you send in your JFK movie ticket stub. By now, especially if you were born after the assassination or are too young to remember it, you may be wondering what all the fuss is about.

To put it as simply as possible, the fuss is about the fact that all the records relating to the assassination of a well-loved President of the United States were locked up, by Executive Order of the man who inherited his job, for reasons of "national security." And since there are unresolved questions regarding the assassination—primarily questions raised by the release of the so-called Zapruder film, a home movie of the entire killing—some people (among them film-maker Oliver Stone) think these sealed records should be opened by Executive Order.

I happen to agree with this. My reasoning is that if there was a conspiracy (which, by law only means that two or more people had to work together to commit the crime), it would be in the best interests of "national security" to find out all about it, rather than to idly speculate that the entire government, from the FBI and the CIA down through the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was in on some massive plot.

The truth cannot hurt America worse than all this theorizing has done. And now that the KGB has released its secret files on Lee Harvey Oswald, it seems that the CIA and FBI (not to mention the IRS, which sealed his tax records—his tax records, for god's sake!—"in the interests of national security") should let us know what they know about this supposed "lone nut." (The KGB says, by the way, that they knew Oswald was a phony defector [i.e. a US spy] and not a real Communist sympathizer, that they kept him under surveillance the whole time he was in the USSR, and further, that they do not believe he acted alone in shooting JFK.)

Okay, so since the records were sealed by Executive Order, they can also be unsealed by Executive Order. That means that whoever is the President can order the records opened. (Whether or not there's going to be anything valuable left in them is another question, but they would be opened and could no longer be the object of wild speculation.)

George Bush is not all that likely to order the records unsealed. He is aware that pressure is building, though (based in part on Stone's movie) because while he was in Australia, he said that he felt no need to re-open the investigation of JFK's death (this despite a 1970s House Select Committee on Assassinations recommendation that the inquiry be re-opened).

Well, at least he knows that the public is interested and wants some action. All you can ask of him, you know, is that he listen to the public. (I know, I know, his record at listening is not so great—that's why I won't be voting for him myself—but he's our Chief Executive now, so he's the one to ask about this matter.)

And he does have a telephone, you know, a White House Comment Line, staffed by a corps of friendly people who will write down your message and actually give it to him.

That's the number. Phone and tell the President that you want the JFK assassination records opened by Executive Order, now. Or tell him anything you want. This is our country, even though parts of its history are being hidden from us. And our President is working for us. Let's let him know what we want him to do.

Miracleman: Apocrypha Heads For Hit Sell-Out

Hot-Looking New Title Has Fans Enthusiastic, Retailers Upping Orders

"Response to Miracleman: The Apocrypha has been nothing short of fantastic," says sales manager Beau Smith. "The book is beautiful, fans are pleased, and retailers are already looking at reordering."

The Apocrypha, designed to neatly fill the gap between Miracleman Book Four: The Golden Age and Miracleman Book Five: The Silver Age by regular series creators Neil Gaiman and Mark Buckingham, has just shipped to stores—and sales have been hot and heavy.

Featured in the first issue are stories by a number of talented creators, all taken from "the library of Olympus," where untold and imaginary stories of the Miracleman Family are kept. A framing sequence by Gaiman and Buckingham sets the stage. Then Steve Moore and Stan Woch tell the tale of "Miracleman and The Magic Pen." "Rascal Prince," by James Robinson and Kelley Jones, gives an alternate view of the evil Kid Miracleman.

Sarah Byam and Norm Breyfogle's "The Scrapbook" takes us back to the world of Mike and Liz Moran, when the new gods were still mortal. And Matt Wagner's "Limbo" presents a compelling conversation between Miracleman and Mors.

"The first issue is beautiful," says editor Valerie Jones, "and I'm pleased as punch. Every story is a knock-out. If ever a book deserved to levitate off the stands, this one would be it."

Miracleman: The Apocrypha is a 32-page colour comic and retails for $2.50.

So let us begin by saying that a graphic novel must be at least 40 pages long, and those 40 pages must be devoted to telling a single "story" — that is, the narrative elaboration of a single main plot. The distinction between story and plot is E.M. Forster's. "The king died and then the queen died" being his classical illustration of a story; "the king died and then the queen died of grief" being his example of a plot. The crucial difference is that although both are sequential narratives, a plot includes the notion of causality.

And this distinction must be included in our definition of "graphic novel" or we risk including within that genre the interminable succession of issues of individual comic magazines that are connected, however tenuously, by cliffhangers on their last pages that prolong their stories from one issue to the next. Notice I said "stories," not plots. While it is possible that some "plots" in such magazines go on for pages and pages, it seems to me more likely that the successive issues of the magazines contain plot fragments — that is, one plot spans two issues, beginning in the middle of one and ending in the middle of the next.

But that does not include such multi-issue productions as the Crisis on Infinite Earths (or whatever it was called), which would be, by the definition I've thus far concocted, a "graphic novel." That, however, seems offensive to the notion of a "novel" being something between one set of covers, so let me modify the definition to embrace that idea — and yet another:

A graphic novel must consist of at least 40 pages of narrative elaboration on a single main plot published between one set of covers with a squareback spine. This makes the package itself an aspect of the definition, but what is length if not an aspect of the package? So why not?

This definition excludes multi-issue productions. It also excludes "anthologies," collections of several stories (or, I should say, "plot elaborations") like, say, the Disney "annuals" for Christmas and summer vacation.

Thus, by these definitions, Wolverine #50, a 70-page plot elaboration, is not a graphic novel because its vehicle is saddle-stitched, not square-spined. The Christmas special of Lobo is likewise a comic magazine: long enough to qualify as a graphic novel, it is not bound properly to qualify. Judgment on Gotham, on the other hand, with a square spine and 62 pages of story with a single plot, is a graphic novel. But then what's Clash? Each of the books in this series is 46 pages of story, but the plot spans several issues. Unless we modify the definition again, this item qualifies only as a "comic magazine" despite its "book-like" binding.

But the book-like binding is a determining factor, so Clash must be seen as several "chapters" in a graphic novel. And, of course, that is what it is; and it may someday be reprinted between a single set of covers — in which case, there will be no disputing that it is a graphic novel. Or would it then be an "album"?

I'd suggest using the term album to describe any square-spine document that reprints from either of the original format, newspaper or comic magazines. This employs the European nomenclature for the reprint book field and therefore has the virtue of meaning roughly the same (LETTERS, Page 12) thing on either side of the Atlantic. So the DC book of several years ago that reprinted all 12 of Moore's Watchmen comic magazines would be an album. So would the Kitchen Sink productions of Alley Oop and the Batman newspaper strips. Ditto the NBM series reprinting Wash Tubbs and Captain Easy.

But albums are not necessarily graphic novels. They may reprint graphic novels — as, for instance, the DC Dark Knight production did when it reprinted all four of Miller's series between a single set of covers — and they may reprint comic magazines. So the careful critic must make a distinction between a graphic novel album and a comic magazine album and a comic strip album.

And let me stop there. I suspect this will not solve all the problems in the world of comics publishing. But I also suspect that none of the problems brought about by lack of decent, working definitions of the products will be solved, unless someone takes a position very similar to the one I adopted for the purpose of this epistle — namely, the stance that only a purely arbitrary re-tooling of terms will work.

Quite apart from the lexical difficulties inherent in a field that publishes "comic books" that are neither, we have the linguistic dilemmas caused by persons who seek to give status to some of their productions by calling comic magazines "graphic novels" because "graphic novel" somehow seems a more dignified artistic achievement than a comic book.

And that, after all, is how we got into this mess to begin with — by seeking status with names rather than with artistic quality. "Prestige Format" is at least candid about what is being done with a name. None of the motives that underlie the use of "graphic novel" for reasons of status are likely to be satisfied, if that term is restricted to productions of at least 40 pages with square-spine bindings. But arbitrarily defined terms don't need to confer status on anything, and that's their value in the present situation.

Or perhaps we should simplify even more and use "book format" for square-spine productions and "magazine format" for saddle-stitched productions and let it go at that.

On another subject, smoking, I very much fear that we are approaching the circumstance of creating a minority in order to have someone to persecute when we start ganging up on all smokers. Goodness knows, we can't persecute people of different colors or races or religions any more, and, as any good psychologist will tell you, it's human nature to have scapegoats handy as outlets for all sorts of viciousness. And smokers have become social pariahs at just the right moment — when we'd run out of all kinds of other minorities to beat up. If we're not careful, smokers will band together and demand constitutional protections as an endangered minority.

So be careful — be kind and compassionate in your discussions of smoking and smokers — or we'll be catapulted into yet another predicament brought on by merciless persecution of minorities.

[Even literary scholars have trouble with length as a distinction between novels and short stories. Henry James's The Turn of the Screw (length about 40,000 words) is a short story; Ernest Hemingway's The Old Man and the Sea (length about 28,000 words) is a novel.

Actually, many novels have appeared serialized in magazines. Even as a serial, they were novels, so we think we have to reject the notion that a novel must be published between one set of covers. (We could go off on another tangent with novels such as The Lord of the Rings, which generally is printed in three separately titled volumes — usually misidentified as novels.)

Smokers already claim to be a persecuted minority and, in a sense, they are, since they are people who are persecuted for their habits. So are serial murderers, however.

When Maggie was in college at Oberlin, some time ago, we had a friend named Sam Hudson who wrote brilliant original musical plays. One song we remember was a WASP (White Anglo-Saxon Protestant) male who lamented the fact that he did not belong to any ethnic minority. Some people will whine over anything; Dave Barry recently wrote a hilarious column about men who lament that they were subjected to an operation immediately after they were born. There actually is an organization of these poor saps creeching and moaning about how they have had to go through life with only a threeskin.

Malcontents are always among us. Some people would complain if they were being hanged with a new rope.]

Your recent discussion of product placement of tobacco products pretty much ruined the movie JFK for me. I mean, there's Jim Garrison discussing conspiracy theories and all I kept noticing was all the people smoking.

I recommend you guys not see this movie. It's really going to tick you off. Oliver Stone has obviously bought into the idea that everyone in the '60s smoked. I lived through the '60s and a lot of people smoked but I didn't and the majority of my friends didn't. When I was watching this movie I kept expecting to see Garrison's dog puffing on a cigar. He was about the only one who didn't light up at some point.

I understand the need for verisimilitude. I could accept some people smoking in some scenes. But most of the smoking in this movie was so unnecessary that it was distracting. There was a scene where Mrs. Garrison was having a conversation with her husband, tidying up the living room, and smoking all at the same time. I didn't understand the purpose of that at all. You couldn't even use the excuse that you needed to have the actor doing something in the scene. Sissy Spacek already had her hands full without the cigarette.

There were other scenes where the smoking did serve a purpose, either to establish a character's personality or his state of mind. In those cases I felt Stone didn't have enough confidence in his actors and so resorted to clichés.

There was a scene where Joe Pesci's character was being questioned by Garrison and his men. He kept lighting up a cigarette, taking a few puffs, putting out the cigarette, and lighting up another one. They even showed a closeup of the ashtray at one point. Of course, they were trying to establish that the character was a hyperactive kind of person and that he was very nervous at being questioned. I think Joe Pesci is certainly a good enough actor that he didn't have to use the old chain-smoking routine.

Even worse was with they did with the character of Clay Shaw. Him they kept showing smoking with a cigarette holder. Was that supposed to show that he was affected, that he was gay? Do all gay men use cigarette holders? Tommy Lee Jones was great in that part. He was so good I didn't even realize it was him. He sure didn't need the cigarette holder gimmick.

If you're right about tobacco companies paying for product placement, they used up a lot of their profits on JFK.

Japanese animation on prime-time television? Only if we want it so.

The Fox television network could be the focus of a write-in campaign, only because the network seems more liberal than CBS, NBC, and ABC.

Most people have said that getting Japanese animation on primetime television, even on the Fox network, is at best remote. But remember when Star Trek went off the air? Fans everywhere wrote in demanding a return of the series and look what happened: a film series and a new television series. What happened with Star Trek can happen with Japanese animation.

There are many fans of Japanese animation from all walks of life and different occupations who could give their views of why they want to see Japanese animation on Fox in prime time. Such a write-in campaign could add weight for Japanese animation, and Fox might pause and consider it and take a chance.

Fox at this time does not have an adventure show, and Japanese quality animation would give it that chance. This could be the fans' chance to express their opinions to Fox and even to their local Fox television station. With an effort on our part we can make Japanese animation on prime time a reality.

Japanese animation is so much more than Bugs Bunny. It can show concepts of loneliness, what happens when your loved ones are killed, what happens when you realize that you have to fight but you really don't want to, and inner conflicts between being passive or being a warrior.

I do not have the address of the Fox network. I am hoping that Comics Buyer's Guide knows the address and to whom to address it.

[The address given in TV Guide is Fox Broadcasting Company, P.O. Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90213. We'd suggest writing the programming director.]

Month after month, Kingpin Comics provides one of the most efficient and reliable advance order services available to comic collectors/investors.

The most dependable investment advice available anywhere,

If you bought all of the books Kingpin President Greg Buls recommended between June '90 and June '91, you could sell all of them back to Kingpin today for a staggering 50% + return.

Each month, Greg makes 1 to 3 picks. Past investment picks include: Ghost Rider 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 15, X-O Manowar 1, Silver Surfer 50, Wolverine 41, 42 Magnus: Robot Fighter 1, Uncanny X-Men 268, 270, 281, Lobo 1, Incredible Hulk 377.

Call or write now for information!

Retailers: Don't risk re-orders! We can supply you with confirmed advance re-orders at 40% off cover price. You pay a little more, but you know you're going to get the books you need!

(This concludes CBG's preview of Vampirella)

well-researched — especially in comparison to other, more recently set series such as Wonder Years, which is week-to-week wall-to-wall with historical error, with no feeling whatsoever for the 1970s in dress, hairstyle, language, or attitude — examples available by request). That is, of course, till the comic-book stuff you mentioned.

And of course, you're right about Captain Marvel Adventures not being around in 1956; the discussion occurred at the soda fountain (near the comics rack), so I don't think we can presume that Nathaniel brought his own three-year-old comics just to get into the philosophical discussion with Sid the fountain owner about who among Superman, Captain Marvel, and Batman is the strongest. And that wasn't the debate's only anachronism; they mentioned gold kryptonite, which (according to Fleisher's Superman encyclopedia) first appeared in 1962. And I was disappointed by the lack of research; an Overstreet is available from pretty well every bookseller I can think of. But I was impressed by the fact that someone (former SNL-cast member and story editor Brad Hall, probably) knew enough of the basics of the character, even to the specific of gold kryptonite, to write the scene in the first place.

But I go along with everything said about smoking on the show. I find watching people smoke nearly as repulsive as being around then when they do it. Watching Marg Helgenberger every week on China Beach, spoiled what otherwise wouldn't have been a perfect show in my eyes (though it, too, had its anachronisms), and I find it disquieting (after dispensing with the personal campaign by Michael Mann on Miami Vice, Crime Story, and Private Eye to make smoking as cool as it seems in the movies) that Brand and Falsey-produced series have their attractive lead actresses smoking: I'll Fly Away (Kathryn Harrold), Northern Exposure (Janine Turner), and a couple of seasons back Wendy Phillips (A Year in the Life) — along with non-smoker Mark Harmon (who was roped into doing similar dirty duty during his stint on St. Elsewhere after Brand and Falsey left) on the pilot for Reasonable Doubts, and poor ex-smoker Kirstie Alley, who's regularly enlisted on Cheers to re-learn her ugly behavior for another bender plot. Of particular repugnance was having Suzanne Sugarbaker take up smoking as a comedy premise on Designing Women last season. And Saturday (LETTERS, Page 19)

the Nov. 29 issue of CBG, and my eyes came to rest on the following listings in Comics in Your Future for Justice League Europe #33, JLA #58, JLE #34 respectively:

- 1) Guy Gardner, Despero, JLI, and Lobo fight
- 2) Guy Gardner tries to stop Lobo's attack on Despero
- 3) The fight among Lobo, Despero, and The Justice League goes on.

If only there were more to the stories than what it says above, but I'll bet good money that that's it. And here I thought the "Break-downs" series was supposed to have some real meat to it.

Justice League, what happened? Bwah-ha-ha-ho-hum!

Evidently, you haven't been a regular viewer of Brooklyn Bridge or you would have known that the series began in the year 1956 (it is now into midwinter of '56-'57). This is made clear explicitly in the pilot and later in the references to music (I've found no anachronistic hits thus far — putting it far ahead of Marian Ross's first series, Happy Days — and Harry Belafonte is rightfully cited as being the number-one pop star of the period), the baseball references to the Brooklyn Dodgers (all players mentioned were actually on the '56 Dodgers, the World Series was accurately reported, Jackie Robinson's departure from the team was the linchpin for an entire episode), and the politics (Eisenhower's re-election, among other things).

While it is probably no more or less "accurate" a representation of the period than anyone can be about a life you didn't live yourself (indeed, do any movies or TV series set in 1992 reflect your present-day experience?), I find it neither too rose-colored nor cynical a look back at Gary David Goldberg's childhood. In total, I have been astonished by the near lack of anachronism in the series (as well as with Homefront, set in 1946-57, and I'll Fly Away, set in 1958-59, both also

Night Live continues its tradition of an all-smoking cast (except Dana Carvey, I think).

But this is probably not where the danger lies. Seeing the ultra-repulsive Conchata Farrells and Rosanne Arnolds (not to mention Katey Sagalls) smoke on TV probably isn't going to encourage teens to pick up their first. But, see, compared to regular society, which is down to nearly 25%, movie actors evidently have a smoking rate of more than 90% — at least, judging by the number of name actors I can come up with whom I have never seen light up on screen. All of the heroic leads you can come up with, from Schwarzenegger to Willis to Michael Keaton — even Kevin Costner — have found it necessary to do it, along with all the admired method guys like DeNiro, Nicholson, and of course, the top 10 leading actresses (Pfeiffer, Roberts, Streep, Hawn, Field, Diane Keaton, Goldberg, Bening, Lange, Sarandon, ad nauseum).

And (it almost goes without saying) every actor from the UK does so almost by requirement. I guess this might be reflective of the psychological makeup of people who become actors — addictive, low-image personalities — but it's always interested me that these are the same people, to a person, who'll go heavily into cosmetic surgery, all the while damaging both their appearance and their vocal abilities by smoking. (You'd think Bette Davis, Lucille Ball, Red Foxx, and John Wayne would have been prominent enough examples, but have you heard — to name just a few — Suzanne Pleshette, William Smith, William Conrad, and Elizabeth Ashley lately? Yeesh!)

Worst, of course, is that, despite the overwhelming majority of adults not setting bad examples for their children, we perpetuate the image of it being cool by making all of the film idols (inherently more hip than anyone on TV, by definition) find no problems with smoking. I think it not only sick as an individual policy by filmmakers, but truly evil by the industry as a whole.

Smoking on Brooklyn Bridge is probably necessary to evoke the time period (the characters, being roughly based on Gary David Goldberg's own relations, most likely just duplicate their actual habits, but I doubt anyone would miss it). I'd rather it wasn't there — though, of course, in the pre-cancer-warning era (circa 1960, right?), nobody thought twice about it.

Homefront gets away with everyone making like the '40s, and the only regular smoker is one of the older, non-attractive supporting characters. But after the pilot episode, the only Brooklyn Bridge regular (besides the cigar-smoking, less-than-sympathetic Sid) shown smoking has been Amy Aquino, so they probably have already toned it down themselves. I find it interesting that, aside from Cagney and Lacey, recent TV series which have featured prominent lead characters as smokers have not fared well at all: All Is Forgiven, Jack and Mike, Uncle Buck, "Slap" Maxwell, Tour of Duty, Rosie O'Neill, Sibs, and Twin Peaks — so perhaps it would behoove Goldberg to remove the smoking now to aid his chances for renewal.

As for John Constantine, I figure Hellblazer sells so few copies in the grand scheme of things (and a lesser percentage even read the issues after buying them) that none of his repulsive behavior will have one whit of impact on anybody, anywhere.

On another subject: While I wasn't looking — and of course, I haven't, since I haven't purchased a new comic book from any retail outlet since 1981 — Milwaukee-area Waldenbooks and Dalton's bookstores have quietly removed both their comic-book and graphic-album racks. Waldenbooks no longer even carries the two Batman reprint volumes their subsidiary published. Is this true only locally, or is it part of a national trend?

[What The World Almanac termed the "pioneer government study on smoking and health" was released in 1964. C. Everett Koop called it "the most significant health statement ever made by the government." On the other hand, cigarettes were called "coffin nails" as long ago as the teens and twenties of this century.

We are becoming increasingly convinced that tobacco companies or pressure groups are paying directly or indirectly to have their products used in movies and on TV. The probability is at least high enough to warrant an investigation.]

Two comments on this John Byrne logo thing: John's Namor logo is fabulous! It was the main reason I started buying the book in the first place. Really. Now I hope he can upgrade the logo for The Sensational She-Hulk. It really needs help.

I'd like to thank Byrne for doing such a wonderful writing job on Iron Man that concludes with this month's issue. Contrary to the usual rumored beliefs, John did not screw up the lead character or "recreate" him. Instead, John added a few new complications that should make the character more interesting in the upcoming months.

Just a quick note to let you know that Tony's Tips from the Jan. 10 issue really made my day.

Tony, keep up the good work!

I wish Peter David would return to writing comics columns — not Star Trek columns, not movie review columns, comics columns.

Peter, I'm a Star Trek fan too, but I don't want to read about Star Trek every week for the rest of my life, if I did want to, I'd buy Starlog. Your villain column was good; let's see more like it!

I wonder if I might be allowed a few column inches in CBG to thank everyone who wrote in response to Aquaman #1. All of them.

I had always planned on answering every letter I could. When I was writing letters, it always meant a little more to me when a writer or an editor (or even, in those long-ago days, a writer-editor) took the time to answer something personally. But from the volume of mail we've gotten so far, that looks like it's going to be quite a task. Kevin Dooley tells me that he's been getting upwards of 18 letters a day.

It's really heartening to know that so many people care about Aquaman, and, as the letters have been almost uniformly positive, that they are pleased and even excited about the work that Kevin, Ken, Bob, Tom, Dan, and I are doing.

Believe me, if the letter gets forwarded to me, I will answer it.

It just may take some time.

So from all of us: Thanks everyone. And stick with us. What's coming is even better.

[To emphasize the obvious: Write Shawn in care of Aquaman comics at DC Comics Inc., 1325 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.]

ways to leverage the Marvel properties into new areas. The WalMart program developed by Anco with Marvel threatened to damage Marvel's brand equity and will be rethought. WAM threatened to alienate direct market retailers and distributors and did not seem to be successful in reaching the broad base of consumers Marvel sought. It, too, is being rethought. American editions of Spanish-language comics, after a disappointing solicitation, were withdrawn.

Given Marvel's aggressive posture in seeking expanded sales, this type of misstep is bound to happen from time to time. The key for Marvel will be to continue to respond quickly when it happens, to abort bad programs, and to tend carefully to the core base of support in the direct market.

Previous Publishers of the Year

1990 — Dark Horse Comics
1989 — DC Comics, Inc.
1988 — No winner
1987 — DC Comics, Inc.
1986 — DC Comics, Inc.

Titles of the Year:

X-Force #1,
X-Men #1

Others have dwelled on negative aspects of these titles — a perception by some of gimmickry (see Controversy of the Year), the lack of artistic risk-taking, and what now appears to be less than a complete sell-through on X-Men #1. But we also know the good things: the value that the special features added to the package; the coordination of packaging, content, and promotion; the solid, mainstream art and story by fan faves; the blockbuster sales; the media attention; and the resulting benefit to the industry as a whole. Overall these titles had a major positive impact on the comics business in 1991, and this award recognizes that impact.

Previous Titles of the Year

1990 — Spider-Man #1
1989 — Batman: Arkham Asylum
1988 — Batman: A Death in the Family
1987 — Batman: Son of the Demon
1986 — Batman: The Dark Knight Returns

Marketing Campaigns of the Year:

X-Force #1,
X-Men #1

Once again, we must honor Marvel for the stupendous sales on these two comic books. The marketing component of those sales was a powerful one, with multiple-copy purchases at the consumer level the norm. These multiple-copy purchases were the result of packaging elements that made consumers want the same editorial material as presented with a number of variations.

The X-Force campaign produced a tremendous influx of interest from card collectors and exposed comic collectors to one of the most powerful forces in card collecting — the "chase" for individual cards which are sold with other products that are duplicates or less desirable than the chase element itself.

The multiple cover and pin-up editions of X-Men and the staggered shipping schedules of those editions produced a massive sell-in to retail stores and an only slightly less massive sell-through to consumers. There was an extremely strong build-up for both titles, with well-coordinated efforts in all areas.

As a side note — a marketing award is an interesting award for a company that until very recently has not had a marketing department. Very recently, Sven Larsen split off into a small marketing department with a few of the functions that are traditionally referred to as marketing. We will watch to see whether this changes how Marvel markets and sells its books. We'll also be watching to see how well Marvel adapts to the loss of its most valuable corporate marketing asset — Carol Kalish.

Marketing Campaign of the Year Runner Up:

Robin II mini-series

When one thinks of Robin II, it's as if DC Marketing Veep Bruce Bristow decided "if they want gimmicks [oops, marketing enhancements] and multiple editions, we'll give them gimmicks and multiple editions." It worked. While the hologram itself was only mediocre, the coupling with multiple cover designs and simultaneous release as a card in the set was good use of the technology. Also, the dwindling number of variants with each issue was a good idea. The in-store promotional kits were beautiful, with lots of neat stuff to create excitement in the comics store. DC has always excelled at such materials, and this is no exception.

We would quibble with the use of the certificates for the collector's set; it adds a level of complication to the distribution chain that should be unnecessary. We also feel that this program overall was at the ultimate limits of complexity for a mini-series promotional effort. But there was much that was good about the marketing of Robin II, and it produced the top two dollar products of the year for DC.

Previous Marketing Campaigns of the Year

1990 — Spider-Man #1
1990 Runner Up — Robin and Lobo
1989 — Legends of the Dark Knight
1988 — (tie) Action Comics Weekly and Batman: A Death in the Family
1987 — Millennium
1986 — Man of Steel

Phenomenon of the Year: Marvel Domination

Although DC began to show a few signs of life in the fourth quarter, 1991 was definitely the year of Marvel. Marvel had media attention, strong sales growth, increased market share, and the biggest releases. The public offering created tremendous interest in Marvel in the financial community, and the announcement of the Spider-Man movie is already generating a lot of excitement, although the movie is not likely to appear before 1993, possibly as late as 1994.

Marvel's market share ranged from around 50% to over 60% during the key summer buying season. During the rest of the year, Marvel held a strong share lead over the nearest competitors, which at times were "all others." The Marvel hegemony has definitely succeeded in many specialty stores, where Marvel's in-store presence is massive. Because of Marvel's skill at playing from strength, it is going to become increasingly difficult for competing publishers to mount an effective challenge, as Marvel's share grows.

Previous Phenomena of the Year

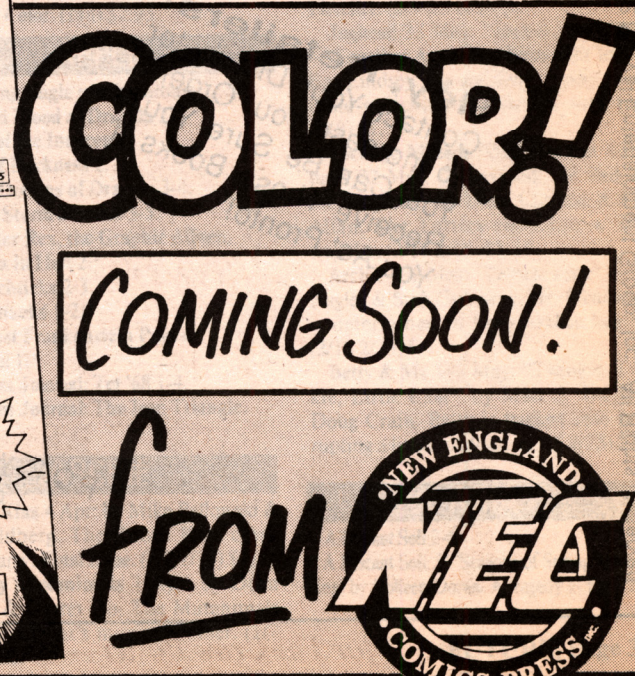

1990 — Return to Basics
First 1990 Runner Up — Turtlemania
Second 1990 Runner Up — Cards in Comics Stores
1989 — Batmania
1989 Runner Up — Product Diversification

1987 — Expensive Formats
1987 Runners Up — Globalization, Distributor Bankruptcies
1986 — Black and Whites

Deal of the Year:

Marvel Public Offering

This deleveraging reverse LBO (leveraged buy-out) made money on a scale never before seen in the comics business. After buying Marvel using only $10 million of his own cash, Ron Perelman's MacAndrews and Forbes sold 40% of Marvel to the public this summer, raising $74 million for debt reduction and owner dividends. Counting the change in value in the stock since the public offering, Perelman's overall profit has to be pushing $200 million. It is a measure of the degree to which major segments of American society (including the financial community) had ignored the vital, growing comics business throughout the last decade, and it is to Perelman's credit for recognizing the potential in such a discrepancy between perception and reality (and probably incidentally getting something for his worthless New World bonds).

Previous Deals of the Year

1990 — Marvel gets Barbie
1989 — First/Berkley to publish Classics Illustrated
1989 Runner-Up — Dark Horse does Aliens vs. Predator
1988 — New World sells Marvel for $82.5 million

1986 — First/Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles

Flop of the Year: Impact Comics

Although DC showed a few signs of life late in the year (the top eight DC products for 1991 shipped in the fourth quarter, and sales for '91 are up over '90), over-all it wasn't a good year for DC. The Impact Line emblemizes DC's weakness in 1991, hence the 1991 Flop of the Year award.

Weak characters, for the most part no-name artists and writers, and late shipping do not add up to a successful formula. It remains inexplicable why DC would pay Archie money for characters the vast majority of current consumers have never heard of. The best that could be said about it is that it was better than Marvel's New Universe, although some might argue the statement.

The amount of money and effort to redevelop the nearly worthless '60s Archie Adventure characters has been quite impressive, but it has to be rated a waste.

The goals of the Impact line seem to have been to attack the younger super-hero audience dominated by Marvel; to establish a better presence in the lower-priced segment to respond to market trends; and as a strategic move to capture new consumers for DC's line at a younger age. Unfortunately, Impact was not the way to achieve these goals.

We recommend that DC concentrate on becoming a more reliable producer of quality super-hero comics featuring the franchise DC characters. There are serious problems at DC, evidenced by the Impact line, shipping delays on DC products, employee turnover, and a general malaise. DC needs to tend to the core business and abandon ill-fated efforts like Impact.

Flop of the Year Runner Up: Disney Comics

The Disney implosion is notable for the quality resources that were thrown at publishing Disney Comics and the lack of success those resources brought. An extremely valuable brand, solid staff, strong start-up, and early reputation as a reliable publisher of quality material did not bring sales adequate to support most of the line. IC notes that Disney had been urged early on to use more editorial material specifically directed at the direct market consumer (specifically lots of Carl Barks and Don Rosa) but, instead, published Disney material by non-fan-fave artists. One opportunity to capitalize on tremendous synergies with direct-market potential was the Rocketeer movie material. The lack of success of the movie made those results lackluster. Let's hope the revamped Disney Comics publishing operation will produce better results next year. We wish them the best.

Controversy of the Year: Gimmicks or Enhancements?

It was definitely a year when special packaging features of comic books became more important than the contents at times, and there has been considerable discussion about whether that is good or bad for the business. Products such as X-Force #1, X-Men #1, the Robin II mini-series, and CyberRad all feature packaging elements designed to pump sales. Multiple editions appear to arouse particular ire from those who oppose such elements. Some retailers and consumers are angered by being "forced" to buy multiple variants of the same editorial material in order to get some unique promotional element.

We see no real moral questions about the inclusion of such promotional elements and feel that market forces are adequate to prevent abuses, as long as accurate information is provided to the retailer and the consumer about what is being sold. The blank Wisdom of Lobo book does not fall within that category. Although Capital City attempted to alert retailers and consumers to the "joke" DC was playing, we don't think it was a good idea for DC to give the impression in its promotional material that there was actually something of value between the covers of the Wisdom of Lobo book.

The other titles mentioned above were accurately promoted to the retailers and public, and as a result we feel that everyone had adequate opportunity to determine whether the product was worth the money being asked.

Hassle of the Year: Toy Biz

Year after year, Marvel's lead toy licensee — Toy Biz — continues to defecate on the direct market. This year was no different, despite Marvel's direct intervention into the distribution chain of its licensee. This time, Marvel solicited the direct market for the new Toy Biz toys, promising that with the clout and good relations afforded by the status of licensor to licensee, Marvel would be able to solicit and deliver Toy Biz products to the direct market, honor purchase orders, provide accurate information, and so on. It was not to be.

matched descriptions, the direct market has been delivered after the products are released through major discount toy stores, partial allocations have made it extremely difficult to get the products out to retail, and Marvel has been loath to provide returns support.

At Capital City, we're just letting our retail customers know when the Toy Biz products arrive and letting them order them on a reorder basis, if they still want them. After a reasonable period we'll see what's left and what Marvel will do about it. We're not going to force our customers to take different products, late, at different prices.

At Capital, we've dealt with a lot of toy companies over the years, and none of them have been a picnic, but Toy Biz gets our award for the Hassle of the Year and perhaps the decade. If Marvel doesn't get out from under Toy Biz before the Spider-Man movie starts driving toy interest up, it will be a lost opportunity for Marvel and the direct market on a major scale.

FUTURE

This list is continually updated and revised. Each company's titles are arranged alphabetically by sales date. The first date in parentheses is the date it is to be shipped to distributors, the second is the on-sale date: (2/4 2/11) would mean the title is to ship Feb. 4 and go on sale Feb. 11; (Feb/Mar) would mean that it ships in February to go on sale in March. If only one date appears — such as (2/4) or (Feb) — that is the shipping date. Comics shops have issues for sale earlier than the official on-sale date.

About late titles

In the following list, titles at the beginning of each publisher's section which do not have a shipping and/or on-sale date are, as far as we can determine, late — those titles had not appeared as of the date this issue went to the printer, according to all the sources we can check. Publishers which do not publish anything within a reasonable length of time will be dropped from the "Comics in Your Future" listing. Corrections, updates, and reschedulings — and more late issues — will be noted two weeks from now, when this list runs again. Publishers should notify CBG if comics on this list have been published, canceled, or rescheduled.

Spunky Todd the Psychic Boy

By Brian Michael Bendis

Poor, poor Spunky Todd! I mean, you really gotta feel sorry for this guy. He's cursed with the ability to read the minds of women, yet he can't even get a date. Well, he's in college now and, with only his faithful yet embittered art-student roommate Andy by his side, Spunky is trying to come to terms with life, babes, and the cliches of being a comic-book character in the '90s.

Those who enjoyed my last projects for Caliber, Quivers and Parts of a Hole, may be surprised at the different route my art has taken. It has always been my belief that it is an artist's duty to find a style to match a project, not a project to match his/her art style.

So enjoy this little peek into Spunky Todd — the Psychic Boy. It is a 40-page, no ads, black-and-white, one-shot, Caliber extravaganza. Then go out and get one. If you do, you can board it and stick it alphabetically into your collection, and it'll help prop up your Spider-Mans.

Street Shadows 1: by Garrett. Mix of new stories and reprints from Caliber Presents. Not for children; b&w. (Feb) $2.95.

The Golden Age of Comics is 10.

I'm not sure who first made that observation, but it always struck me as a pretty fair call for that age when one first looks at comic books with something more than casual interest. With, if you will, a sense of wonder.

It was closer to 12 for me. Fantastic Four Annual #1. Arguably the best comic book I ever read. No turning back after I bought that one. The course of my life was set from the moment I saw that "Spider-Man waits within these pages!!" Two exclamation marks. Never mind that I didn't know who Spider-Man was and had read only one other Marvel comic book, the considerably less golden Fantastic Four #7, in my life. I was, then and forevermore, crazy for the comics.

I read comic books at 10, too, of course. Mostly Superman, Batman, and Challengers of the Unknown. I wasn't fanatic about it. I'm not sure I even noticed numbers back then. If I had a dime on me and saw a cover that intrigued me, I'd buy the comic book. Me being 10 and then being 1961, I seldom picked up those Superman comics that cover-featured stories involving Big Blue's love life. Or old, fat, and boring Perry White.

I have a lot more sympathy for Perry White these days.

I also buy some of the comic books Tony (age 10) passed by on those occasions when I can find reasonably priced reading copies at conventions or stores. It's a giggle to read these comics from my youth with the sensibilities of my (barely) middle age. Like, for instance:

Action Comics #274. March 1961.

"Have you ever felt sorry for Lois Lane because Superman, the mighty man she loves, won't marry her for fear his enemies would seek to hurt him by harming his bride? A hopeless situation, isn't it? But wait a minute!

What if the situation were reversed, and it was Lois who has the super-powers?"

That's the basis for "The Reversed Super-Powers!" "Superman" loses his powers. Lois gets them. He proposes to her. She turns him down. "Superman" turns out to be an incredibly arrogant Superman Robot Z, who orchestrated this whole charade to prove Lois was no more than a fabled digging super-groupie. As his battery sputters its last, Robot Z confesses all to the real Superman:

"For many years, this scheming female, Lois Lane, has sought to lure you into marriage. I have long suspected she wished you for a mate, not because of human love, but because she was dazzled by your super-powers and fame!

"Lois Lane is unworthy of you, master! When she possessed super-powers and believed you did not, this woman refused to marry you! ... gasp... whrrr-whrrr..."

Now I knew the Superman of the '60s could be a pompous jerk at times, but I never realized he'd programmed his robots to be major buttheads, as well.

Then again, Lois of that era isn't exactly the NOW role model herself. When Superman tells her she made the right decision and, without any apology for his robot's behavior, bigheartedly offers to "forget it ever happened," Lois can only gaze longingly skyward and soliloquize:

"How understanding Superman is! I love him more than ever! Perhaps we will be married one day. He's... wonderful!"

You'll be happy to know Robot Z was repaired by Superman and is currently serving in Congress under the name Arlan Specter, one heck of a comic-book name if ever I heard one.

The letters page in this issue is equally enlightened. An editorial explanation that Supergirl's skirt is reversible, blue on one side, red on the other, and she switches sides to suit her fancy, goes on to ask the rhetorical question:

"After all, aren't all members of the fair sex capricious?"

You want to field that one, Maggie?

Then there's Action Comics #278, July 1961.

"Perry White, hardboiled but well-meaning editor of the Daily Planet, is suddenly seen in a new and startling role, as an astonishing sequence of events gives him super-powers!"

The astonishing sequence of events in "The Super-Powers of Perry White" goes like this:

Perry sees an obviously alien plant in his garden. He has no idea what it is, but that doesn't stop him from chowing down on its fruit. Even at 10, I was smarter than that. I would have screamed at the top of my lungs, "Perry! Just say no!"

The alien plant is Xasnu from the planet Zelm. Landing here on Earth as a spore, it grew into a mature plant. Its fruit gives Perry super-powers and then allows Xasnu to acquire "complete control of his body and mind!" The typical battle royal between hero and editor ensues, ending when Supergirl flies into the action and bounces a chunk of white kryptonite off Perry's noggin.

As Supergirl puts it: "Ahhh... my theory was right! The alien is dying! You see — the alien is a plant intelligence, and it is a known fact that white kryptonite destroys all forms of plant life!"

Caught up in his cousin's girlish enthusiasm, Superman rushes the white kryptonite to Perry's garden to destroy the rest of poor Xasnu. Supergirl reflects further on this astonishing sequence of events when Superman rejoins her.

"Isn't it ironic... that what defeated Perry White was white kryptonite?"

And isn't it convenient that the super-cousins' code against killing apparently excludes non-humanoid sentient life?

Which sort of ties in with an editorial response in this same issue to a reader's request for more stories featuring real people like Pat Boone and Ralph Edwards:

"You'll be pleased to know we are currently negotiating with famed comedian Jerry Lewis for permission to star him in an adventure with Mr. Mxyzptlk. Can you imagine Jerry Lewis and the imp both pestering Superman with their practical jokes?"

Only when I'm lying on the floor, curled into a fetal ball and whimpering while passing kidney stones. Just imagine how bad I'd feel if they'd actually done that story. Yeesh!

Let's do some reviews until the horror subsides.

• Mammoth Cafe #1 (Paradise Valley Comics; $1) is the new self-publishing comic booklet from Pam Bliss. The cook at the landmark eatery of the title is a former Chinese imperial chef. One of Cook T'ing's best customers is Mountain Red Sky, the city force's first Yeti detective. The comic is kinky, quirky fun. Bliss is growing as a cartoonist with each new project. Her work is individual and original. I can't wait for comicdom's effete elitists — and we all know who they are — to discover her, little knowing that we stodgy traditionalists at the bad of CBG already realize how cool she is. Send a stamp for the Paradise Valley catalog to: Pam Bliss, P.O. Box 304, Valparaiso, Ind. 46384.

Continuing in the self-publishing vein:

• Mythinking #1 ($1) is a new fanzine by Gene Phillips. He's an advocate of analytical articles about comics. This little zine is "devoted to comprehending those structures of meaning — i.e., the 'myths' — that underlie all forms of literature: highbrow, middlebrow, or lowbrow." Trust me, it's not as dry as it sounds in this brief report. Phillips, who wrote all the pieces in this premiere issue, is a clever and very readable scholar. If you've never sampled this sort of fanzine, Mythinking is worth a shot. Just send a buck to: Gene Phillips, 2750 Holly Hall, #1105, Houston, Texas 77054.

I picked up a copy of another '60s favorite recently, Action Comics #309, February 1964. Featuring all the members of Superman's family in "The Superman Super-Spectacular." One of my must-have comic books for a number of reasons.

Then-President John Kennedy asks Superman to retrieve a nose cone to be presented as a gift to a "brave astronaut" on a program called Our American Heroes. Which is much better than, say, some old watch or something. Anyway, Superman does the job, and Kennedy thanks him profusely ("Great service... repay you... don't hesitate to call.") and sends Supes out on other errands for the same television show.

Superman, not exactly a point of light in this story, if you catch my drift, doesn't know that his friends are gathering at the studio to honor him on the first episode of this live show. Such "team-ups" were still rare at that time. So reason number one has to be the appearance of more than two dozen characters in one tale.

I don't know who wrote the story, though it is good and goofy fun, but the artwork is by Curt Swan and George Klein. Reasons two and three.

Superman is pleasantly surprised by the honor. His one, very minor, concern is that Clark Kent is supposed to appear on the TV show, too. No problem. His super-ventriloquism can summon one of his robots to masquerade as Clark at the proper time.

Unfortunately, Lois Lane and Lana Lang have a robot detector with them, determined to prove their mutual suspicion that Clark is really Superman. Just as well. That Robot Z would have been just impossible to live with when he found out about this. Ever hear a snotty machine repeating "I told you so" over and over again?

Fall-back possibilities Chameleon Boy and Batman are quickly eliminated by various contrived plot-devices. Which rather puts our Superman in the deep end of things.

Five panels before the end of the story, which is cutting it pretty close, Clark Kent walks on stage to greet Superman. But if he isn't a robot or Batman or Chameleon Boy, just who is this twin in Kent's clothing?

None other than President Kennedy.

"Superman, I told you to call on me if ever you needed help — and I'm glad you did! And I'll guard your secret identity as I guard the secrets of our nation!"

"I realize that, sir! I know I wasn't risking my secret identity with you! After all, if I can't trust the President of the United States, who can I trust?"

OK, stop that silly laughing out there.

The answer is: not Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald and 11 and 12 years old this year.

We owe them some wonderment.

See you next week.

Tony Isabella, feeling somewhat capricious this month, didn't make it to the show he mentioned at the end of his last column and offers his apologies. I could grouse about our sewer pipe backing up, but the only synonym for effluvium Don and Maggie would let me use was X-Force and I really think I've kicked enough sand in Rob Liefeld's face for a while. Send those cards, comments, and heartfelt letters of gratitude to me at: Tony's Tips, c/o P.O. Box 1502, Medina, Ohio 44258. Let's all have a group hug now.

Tundra, FantaCo join to publish 'Zombie War'

FantaCo and Tundra will be co-publishing a new action-adventure-horror series entitled Zombie War. The two-part series, which begins in April, was created and written by Kevin Eastman and Tom Skulan. The art is by Kevin Eastman and Eric Talbot.

The worldwide scenario of this tale will spread over into a wide variety of other products. An official "Zombie War" camouflage T-shirt will be solicited for release simultaneously with issue #1. Other shirts featuring prominent characters from the series will be released throughout the summer.

Summer will also see the release of the Zombie War Handbook and "Zombie War Card Set." The handbook will supply detailed information on the characters, weapons, and vehicles which are part of this series. Eastman and Skulan will be using the handbook to detail all the creatures and hardware that didn't make it into the comic-book series. The card set will be full-color paintings detailing the Zombie War story. All art will be exclusive to the cards. As a bonus, the majority of the scenes on the cards were deleted from the comics issues or only marginally touched upon in the series.

Fall 1992 will see the release of the Zombie Warbook. The book, approximately 100 pages long, will be released in hard-cover only and will retail for around $15. A signed-and-numbered edition will also be solicited.

Zombie War is being promoted by both FantaCo and Tundra. Promotions include print ads, press releases, giveaways, interviews, and appearances at conventions and trade shows.

Ralph Snart is coming back

Now Comics has signed Marc Hansen, creator of Ralph Snart, to produce a three-issue mini-series which is scheduled to begin in March 1992.

"We're very happy to see more of the manic CPA by Marc Hansen, and I'm sure the fans will be, too," said Tony Caputo, publisher of Now Comics. "We have been negotiating with Marc for months and have finally reached an agreement."

Ralph Snart Adventures was Now Comics' first publication, in May 1986. The first issues made up a three-issue, black-and-white mini-series which sold for a dollar each. Ralph Snart Adventures went on to become a black-and-white monthly which became one of the many victims of the black-and-white explosion.

"Our newsstand contract with Warner took Ralph Snart to a new level of success," said Caputo. "The comic book outsold many of our other titles."

The mini-series will be published in two formats: a direct-market version, which will not be approved by the Comics Code Authority, and a Code-approved newsstand version with a completely different cover. The direct-market version will have four polybagged trading cards which will ship weekly to the comic shops. Comics shop owners will be able to order specific quantities of each trading card edition each week. The newsstand version will have the cards randomly inserted.

"These special cards will be part of a set of trading cards to be produced in June 1992," said Caputo.

Ralph Snart Adventures Volume 4, #1 will ship the first Friday of March and retail for $2.50 ($2.95 in Canada).

VINTAGE CHARLTON CHARLTON COMICS

Ignored by many, scorned by some, this neglected company published many classic horror, crime, and science-fiction comics in the early fifties. If you're a Steve Ditko fan, you'll find some great gems that you've been looking for a long time. We have unearthed a collection of over 3000 Charltons, and here is just a few of the good ones!

Will Jacobs and Gerard Jones, the copyright owners of The Trouble With Girls, and Eternity Comics, a division of Malibu Graphics Publishing Group extend their sincere apologies to
DC Comics Inc. and The Conde Nast
Publications, Inc. for publishing without permission depictions of DC's copyrighted characters
The Green Lantern, Superman, and
The Elongated Man and Conde Nast's copyrighted character The Shadow on the cover of The Trouble With Girls #23. The original intent of the cover was humorous and we sincerely regret that we used actual depictions of DC and Conde Nast characters. We regret any confusion this may have caused in the marketplace and apologize as well to any readers who may have been misled.

THE "KILLER" INSTANT INVENTORY!!

Not a mass, not a jumble, but an inventory - not 1-50 of an issue, not 1-20, not 1-10, not even 1-5, but an inventory most dealers don't see in a lifetime, even if they have all the books; 52 long comic boxes in alphanumeric order, maximum 3 of an issue

That's over 19,000 books in order (that's more than 2 weeks of sorting work), no more than 3 of a number, about 45% Marvel, 40% DC, 15% Independents, 1975 up, VG-F or better, mostly nice from, 60% + VF-NM $8500 shipping

AND THAT'S NOT ALL!!!! Since not all books are created equal, we are adding:

1) 3 boxes of 'X' & Mutant titles, such as X-Men, X-Factor, New Mutants, Excalibur (no more than a sprinkling of Alpha Flights), etc., no more than 15 of a number

2) 2 boxes of Spider-Man titles (including 2 @ of Spider-Man 298, 299); Web, Spectacular, Team Up

3) 1 box of Batman & Detective (incl. 5 "Death in the Family" Sets (426-429)!!)

4) 1 box with a minimum update value of $1000 That's 59 boxes with 20,700 + books

AND THAT'S STILL NOT ALL: We hate odd figures, so we'll throw in a box of miscellaneous whatever (Harvey, Archie, etc.) to make it 60 BOXES & A GUARANTEED 21,000 + BOOKS

OH NO! THERE'S MORE!!!!!! Once the deal is done, send us a $1000 order (Maximum 5 of an issue) from our extensive wholesale lists, and we will fill out $500 of it, ABSOLUTELY FREE AND MORE!!!!!! For the year following the deal, take 25% off of any order you make from our wholesale lists (max. 5 of a number, maximum total orders $4000)

THE NO FRILLS VERSION: The basic inventory of 19,000 + books in alphanumeric order $6300 plus shipping

ATTENTION: There is only one inventory of this description available at this time, duplicates or variants can be assembled, but costs are likely to be higher.

THE WHOLE BIT $8500

THE YEAR IS 1997...

The President has been assassinated

The economy is on the brink of disaster

Drug use is on the rise

Violent anti-social forces are menacing the people

Born in an atmosphere of fear, chaos, and despair, The Elite Police battle the enemies of order. Whether deadly measures can and should be used in the battle against drug gangs, terrorists, and radical racists is for every individual to decide.

Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre

By Batton Lash

I recently received a letter that carried a new wrinkle to the old question, "Where do you writers get your crazy ideas?"

I don't want to give the name of the letter writer, because he asked this question out of sincere curiosity, and I don't want people to think that this particular guy is the author of extremely stupid questions. Why hold him up to public ridicule?

Basically, he had read a recent book of mine and asked, "How did you come up with the idea?" The trouble was, the book he had read was my novelization of The Rocketeer, published by Bantam to coincide with the release of the Disney film.

This is one of those instances where the answer is quite easy: I came up with the idea when I was sent the script and asked if I would be interested in novelizing it. It's the purest form of work-for-hire there is.

I don't know how the letter writer could have missed this pertinent point. The film was in wide release. It was heavily advertised. The names of the script writers were right on the cover, in type size the same as my name. Yet he was unaware of any participation or incarnation of The Rocketeer beyond my connection with it. He probably thinks "Dave Stevens" is a shortstop for the Astros or something.

Now, the vast majority of readers out there who believe that an idea is everything — the kind who come up to you and say, "I have an idea. Lemme tell it to you, you write it, and we'll split it 50/50" — probably think that doing a novelization (book form) or adaptation (comics form) of a movie has got to be the easiest thing in the world. Heck — the story is already told! All you have to do is stick "He said" and "She said" at the end of the lines of dialogue and, boom, you got it. Easy money.

Uh uh. Taking a script and converting it into a novel or comic is one of the biggest pains in the neck of all time, if you're someone who's of a mind to try to do a good job of it. The money's generally pretty lousy, and the success or failure of the final product usually depends entirely on how the movie does.

The existence of novelizations made sense in the old days, when people left a movie and wanted a tangible reproduction of the film that they had just enjoyed. A novel or comic book was the closest they were going to be able to come to "owning" the film. Now, of course, with videotapes you can own the film. The initial concept is obsolete. Nowadays, the only point of telling a movie story in some other form is to try to do things the movie can't or didn't do — and, oddly, enough, the worse a script is, the better chances you have to do precisely that. But in comics, babe, forget it.

Unless you've got a spectacular artist on the comic book (like Russ Heath on The Rocketeer or Al Williamson on Blade Runner some years back) that makes it a unique comic package, then it's a waste of space. From a writer's point of view, it's more trouble than it's worth — not writing so much as creative typing: the literary equivalent of a jigsaw puzzle. The only reason a writer has to get involved in a comics adaptation is if he's really interested in the movie and is anxious for some sort of inside track or knowledge as to what's going on. It's certainly the only reason I've done it. This, of course, can be a double-edged sword: I think I would have enjoyed Star Trek VI far more, if I hadn't read the script first and realized how full of holes it is.

Herewith my handful of participations in movie adaptations:

The Return of Swamp Thing. The initial scuttlebutt that I'd heard about this film was somewhat positive. The costume was supposed to be much less "rubbery," Abby was supposed to be introduced, and there was going to be an attempt to be faithful to the Alan Moore version of Swamp Thing that was then running in the comics. Berkley Books wanted me to do the novelization based on my comics experience and several other novels that I had written for them, novels which got about as much distribution as blood in a corpse. I agreed to write it without having first read the script.

Big mistake. Never, ever, do this, especially if you've never heard of the director or script writer.

They sent me the script and I started reading it. By a third of the way through, I was having intestinal cramps. By the end of the script, I was bleeding from my eyeballs. I knew beyond a doubt that there was going to be a major problem. The script was as arch and campy as anything out of the 1960s Batman. The only resemblance to Moore's Swampy was a re-enactment of the tuber-eating sequence — undoubtedly the single most difficult moment in all of Moore's run to try to pull off on screen, unless you have the entire audience on hallucinogenics before the film.

And I was supposed to try to turn this thing into a book. And I didn't have a lot of time in which to do it.

There were two ways to go: the easy way or the hard way. The easy way, maybe even the smart way, was to stick to the script, do the best I could to make it read smoothly, and put a fake name on it so that I would not be associated with such a lousy work of fiction. The hard way meant doing whatever needed to be done to make it work, not only as a story, but as a story that was going to be acceptable to those fans who were enjoying the Moore work on the comic.

Ultimately, I couldn't bring myself to risk disappointing the fans. I didn't want to turn out some thoughtless piece of hackwork. The result was a novel which bears almost no resemblance to the film.

I restructured the entire story, built in framing sequences, changed the order in which things happened, added entire backstories, put Alan Moore in as a character (why not?), restored the stilted speech pattern to Swamp Thing (as opposed to the avuncular manner in which Dick Durock spoke), restored the general horror comics feel, and completely changed the ending, directly lifting the climax from the Moore two-parter with the town of vampires wherein Swamp Thing basically becomes a mountain. I like to tell people that the movie had a budget of $3 million, but the book had a budget of $53 million.

To the credit of the producers, they loved everything I did with it and didn't change a thing, which was of tremendous relief to me.

So what happened? The film was poorly received, and virtually no one (if I'm to believe the Berkley royalty reports) bought the damned book. Apparently my name on the cover and eight pages of poorly reproduced, cheesy photographs on the inside were insufficient to entice people to part with four bucks. The only real compliment I ever got on the book was when Bob Greenberger, when asked by fans about the Swamp Thing movie, would reply tersely, "Skip the movie. Read the book."

Star Trek V and Star Trek VI: If you ever want to engage in an exercise in futility, try doing a comic-book adaptation of a Trek movie.

Doing a novelization, by contrast, can be very rewarding. Invariably, Trek films are filled with technical holes. Why? Because the movies aren't written by fans, that's why. But the novels are by people who came up through the ranks, as it were, and Trek fans delight in the novels' innovative explanations for various grievous errors (such as how the Enterprise could possibly have survived the intense conditions of the galaxy's center in ST V and the myriad foul-ups, bleeps, and blunders that pervade ST VI).

But the comic book? Forget it. You get the worst of both worlds doing a Trek comics adaptation.

First, movie scripts are in constant states of flux. Between the time of the script that you're given to adapt and the final version that goes up on the screen, there are inevitably changes ranging from dialogue to pacing to entire scenes being restructured or added or dropped. Standard movie fans will simply observe that there are dif-

COMICS TRADER

You may buy as many Trader ads as you wish at $31.00 each. They are run as you send them, reduced to fit into Trader units. (Recommended size for originals is 8x10") New advertisers: Please supply CBG with your current street address and phone number to avoid delay.

DEAR COMIC PEOPLE:

UNFORTUNATELY, DUE TO TIME LIMITS I COULD NOT PLACE AN AD IN THIS ISSUE AS I HAD HOPED. HOWEVER, I HAVE PLACED THIS AD TO ALLOW ANY OF THE BARGAIN HUNTERS WHO WISH TO CALL ME IF THEY CAN CATCH ME WHEN I'M IN TO GET A FAX OR DESCRIPTION OF WHAT I AM SELLING.

I HAVE THE USUAL 1ST PUNISHER, 1ST HULK ETC ETC AND MANY KEY SILVER AGE'S AND YOU MAY CALL/WRITE ABOUT THESE BUT I AM PRESENTLY TRYING TO WHOLESALE OUT A BUNCH OF GROUP SETS, SOME OF WHICH ARE AS FOLLOWS:

X-MEN #94- PRESENT + ABOUT 30 BELOW 94

BUY COMICS TRADER ADS

AND GET THE MOST SPACE FOR YOUR ADVERTISING DOLLAR!

Remember, the better looking and easier to read your Comics Trader ad is, the more business you will do. Here are some tips on making your ad the most effective:

- Do not use small letters. Each 8 1/2 x 11 sheet is reduced down to fit a single Comics Trader Box. If you use small letters before reduction, the copy may be illegible after.
- Do not FAX your Comics Trader ads. The ad copy becomes distorted and appears blotchy when printed.
- Use clean white paper, clean typewriter keys and a dark ribbon.
- Include ordering information, postage rates, name, address and telephone numbers. This leaves no questions unanswered and avoids delay.
- NEW ADVERTISERS: Must supply CBG with your current street address and phone number to avoid delay. If you choose not to list your phone number in your ad, you must provide CBG with your current phone number.

ferences between the comic book or novel and the movie. Trek fans, on the other hand, for whom the visual depiction is usually the be-all and end-all of Star Trek, will loudly proclaim, "The comic book is wrong!" Which, I admit, irritates me.

The second, and even bigger problem with doing any comic book adaptation is, unless you're being given an unlimited number of pages, there is no way in hell you're going to fit everything in. In Trek VI, I was given 64 pages to cover a 130-page script. For Trek V, I had even fewer (54, I think).

The trick is that you have to try to second-guess the audience. There are invariably certain lines, certain scenes that people remember very distinctly. If the fan reads the comic book and those memorable moments are missing, he's going to feel cheated. So you have to predict what the audience is going to come out of the film remembering. (What really drives you insane is when they come up with lines or bits of business on the set while filming the movie, and these things don't appear in any script. And then the fans complain that you left the thing out.)

With Trek V, it was actually a bit of an easier time. Not only were there not many memorable sequences, but the script was replete with moments that I was certain people would want to forget. The trouble wasn't finding what to cut; it was finding enough worthwhile material to keep in. Unfortunately, critical reaction was predictable. The kindest thing that most fans could say was, "Well, I didn't hate it as much as the movie." There's a pull-quote you want to send home to mom.

Trek VI, I was amazed to see, panned out exactly the way I thought it would. I read the script and was struck by how lousy it was. But I thought, "OK, but Nick Meyer is directing this. With the combination of the directing, the special effects, the acting, and the music, this film might actually be very well received."

It was a much tougher script to adapt. The plot was much more dense than ST V. Furthermore, there were lots of sequences in it that made me crazy. In a novel, you can explain them, try to fill in the holes. In a comic book, you simply don't have the room. So what I wound up dropping were not necessarily the less-memorable sequences, but instead simply those that I couldn't stand because they so violated continuity or were obvious contrivances.

For example: a sequence which introduced not only the nonexistent Enterprise kitchen but also the unprecedented notion that firing an "unauthorized" phaser set off an alarm. This script contrivance was introduced to explain why a pair of incriminating magnetic boots (worn during a murder and stained with Klingon blood) were not simply phased from existence by the guilty parties. Not only was it forced but it did nothing to explain why the guilty parties did not simply scatter the boots' molecules all over space using the transporter. That would've gotten rid of them nicely. So I dropped the whole thing.

Likewise the absurd sequence where Uhura bluffs her way into Klingon space using badly spoken Klingonese and juggling textbooks. Supposedly the Klingons would have detected, if the crew had spoken to them using a universal translator. OK, fine. But why couldn't Uhura use the translator to understand what the Klingons were saying? What's with the books? I knew it was going to be a funny sequence, but I dropped it anyway, because I found it demeaning to the characters.

The results were predictable. Most of the reviews I read of the adaptation said in essence, "A waste of money. Not as good as the movie. They left out all the best parts." Some people even criticized plot points in the comic book that had never bothered them in the movie — and deemed them the comic book's fault.

At least the photos in the deluxe edition were in color and didn't look cheesy.

The Rocketeer: I discussed at length in other places. In a nutshell, I wound up doing both the adaptation and the novelization. The former I did because I was interested to see the script and I was also certain that, with Heath on the art, it would be a quality-looking project. The latter I did against the advice of a number of people who warned me that Disney had put poor Max Allan Collins through living hell with the novelization of Dick Tracy and I could only look forward to more of the same. But I knew the script inside and out, because I'd already done the adaptation, so I figured I had that leg-up at least.

What I did to try to grease the wheels with Disney was put in all sorts of utterly outrageous add-on scenes, so that the Disney folks would have stuff to look at and say, "You can't be serious! Take this out!" And so, I figured, they'd focus on the big stuff and not nitpick the thing to death, as they had with Al Collins.

To my shock, the thing sailed through Disney. The Bantam editor had sworn that Disney would not be a problem this time around, and he's been true to his word. As a result, lots of stuff that I never seriously intended to see print — such as Cliff Secord meeting young George Reeves — went in. It was the easiest time I'd ever had with an adaptation or novelization.

The main thing you have to do with any of these things is try to remember that you're converting from one medium to another and try to maximize the advantages that the new medium offers. But, frankly, if I'm ever contacted about another one of these adaptations, I'll probably just steer clear of it. They're far more trouble than they're worth.

Unless, of course, it's a movie that I'm really interested in.

Peter David, writer of stuff, is currently spending his spare time engaged in battling "Dragon's Lair II: Time Warp." Having mastered the original "Dragon's Lair" as well as "Space Ace" in his misbegotten youth, he is enjoying this nostalgic entertainment. He's also pleased to see that, apparently after giving birth to nearly a dozen kids, Princess Daphne still looks great. He is currently on level 6 (out of 8). Updates as they occur.

In all the articles about the recent 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, one had particular significance to the comics field. The map of Hawaii which appeared in the New York Daily News on April 8, 1941, showing the location of Pearl Harbor, was drawn by Tom Gill.

That's the same Tom Gill who is best known in our field for drawing comic books for Dell and Gold Key, most particularly The Lone Ranger. Other comic books he drew included Bonanza, Hi-Yo Silver, Fury, Time Tunnel, and World of the Giants.

He also has taught art at what is now the School of Visual Arts and is working on a book called Drawing by Association.

Fans of 3-D (not you, Tony; not you, Bob) will want to check out the breakfast-"food" section of their grocery stores for Captain Crunch 3-D. I don't know who produces the "cereal," but the 3-D effects are by Ray Zone.

It was reported in the Dec. 27, 1991, Los Angeles Times that Warner Bros. has recovered 3000 cartoon cels and background drawings, with a value estimated at up to $500,000.

The cels, from Tiny Toon Adventures, were recovered through private investigators and federal lawsuits. Warner Bros. has settled a civil suit with three people found in possession of some of the material, and a similar case against two others is pending.

One of the defendants said that he thought that the cels were being thrown away and that he was saving them from being destroyed.

Danny Lee sent a clipping from The Sacramento Bee in response to Peter David's recent column about overly scholarly analyses of The Little Mermaid.

The clipping quotes Dr. Bruce H. Sklarew, a co-chairman of something called the Psychoanalytic Study of Film, who sees Casablanca as a tale of Oedipal yearnings.

"How many years do you think passed between the time Bogart and Bergman first fell in love and when they meet again? A year and a half! But he looks much younger in Paris. He even has a different haircut, as though it's way in the past, in the Oedipal period."

The real success of Casablanca, he psychobabbles, is that Bogie rejected the opportunity to fulfill his Oedipal yearnings and successfully moved into the latency state.

I dunno about you, but the ridiculous notion of Bogart having a different haircut 18 months ago convinces me. It couldn't be due to anything like having a different barber in Paris than he has in Casablanca, after all.

I just turned up the results of the John Byrne Awards which were presented by a distinguished group of people (Tony Isabella, Gary Barker, John Byrne, and — ahem — me) at the Mid-Ohio-Con in November. These awards were voted upon by attendees of the North Coast Convention last spring. Favorite monthly series is Sandman, favorite limited series is Lobo, favorite character is Spider-Man, favorite writer is Jim Starlin, favorite penciller is Todd McFarlane, and favorite inker is Terry Austin.

There is a bit of superstitious claptrap going around about Blade Runner because several of the corporations and brand names shown in that picture's future Los Angeles have gone belly-up or posted significant losses of revenue (given the current recession, it would be astonishing if they had not): Atari, RCA, Cuisinart, Pan Am, and Bell Telephone, among them.

Flashback: 45 years ago

Dell Comics begins publication of a Henry comic book with the first issue drawn by creator Carl Anderson and dated October 1946. Unlike the comic strip, the comic-book Henry has the power of speech.

Flashback: 55 years ago

Manvis Publications releases the pulp magazine Ka-Zar Vol. One, #1, October 1936, written by Robert Byrd. The introductory story is titled "King of Fang and Claw."

COMICS TRADER:

This is an area reserved for the "little guy" who wants no-frills advertising with a price to match. $31.00 buys one of the 12 equal spaces on a Comics Trader page. These spaces can be bought in any multiple of the $31.00 unit. We'll reduce the ad and handle all the production - just design your ad on an 8x10" space and send it with payment. Remember to keep your design simple so your ad will be readable when reduced.

COLLECTOR'S SHOWCASE:

This cost-efficient format in COMIC BUYER'S GUIDE offers you typeset space at a discount. Collector's Showcase units are approximately business card size. You may buy as many units as you want for an ad at a cost of $20.00 per box. All typesetting, photos, art, borders and logos are done by Krause Publications and are included in the price.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY:

One column ads, 1-3 inches in length, must appear in the classified section. They may be placed under the various classified headings. This gives you the advantage of targeting the collectors you want to reach while standing out among the smaller word ads in classified. Rates and sizes are as follows:

(Cost per ad; ads must run consecutively):

AD SIZE	1 ISSUE	6 ISSUES	13 ISSUES	26 ISSUES	52 ISSUES
1. 1 col. x 1" (1 1/4" x 1")	$15.56	$15.17	$14.39	$13.62	$12.84
2. 1 col. x 2" (1 3/4" x 2")	22.03	21.48	20.38	19.28	18.17
3. 1 col. x 3" (1 3/4" x 3")	28.53	27.82	26.39	24.96	23.54

CLASSIFIED WORD ADS:

Our "Classified" are thriving and heavily read. Base rates are 22¢ per word with discounts for multiple issues. Please print and punctuate - we are not responsible for errors due to long-hand and illegible copy. For more information see the classified ad form in the classified section.

RETAILER DIRECTORY:

This is a comprehensive listing of comic shops in and around the U.S. $3.00 a week leads buyers to your store by listing your name, address, phone number, and ten words of copy you choose. May be purchased in 26 or 52 week increments only. For more details see the Retailer Directory pages of this issue.

GENERAL INFORMATION

- PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.
- CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, MasterCard II, Barclay Card, Access Card, Eurocard, Diamond Card, Union Card
- DEADLINE: For all advertising is noon each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.
- TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide reference information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.
- CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract terms. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.
- MINORS are required to furnish a certificate of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted. Write for our convenient form.
- ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from longhand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.
- LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credits will not be allowed for conceptual variations.
- GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Overstreet's "The Comic Book Price Guide". Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.
- RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within five working days of its receipt by a customer.
- P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but permanent home address or place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.
- SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium. Inquire for details.
- ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.
- CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.
- SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.
- PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.
- CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.
- PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.
- NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as an acceptance of all rates and conditions under which advertising is at the time sold. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions, which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom made against the publishers. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, fire, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectionable for any reason. This publication does not guarantee and disclaims all knowledge of the right of seller or buyer to contract.
